D: Late President of the State University, of Indiana; Delivered Before the Alumni of the University, by Theophilus Parvin, M. D., Of Indianapolis, Indiana, July 14th, 1858, at Bloomington Alma Mater welcomes her soils to their former home. And I would wrong the present members of her household - her honored Faculty and true Students, - I would wrong the generous citizens of Bloomington, did I not declare that they all unite in a kindly greeting. Turn in hither for a day, O Pilgrim. Lay aside thy staff; with unsandaled foot tread once more this hallowed ground, and drink again from the fountain of thy youth. Come, O Soldier. Let the battle wage to-day, and no shout of thine be heard, no blow of thine be struck amid the tumult of the world's strife; participating this fraternal reunion, evoking long-buried and precious memories, pledging anew devotion to Truth, Learning, and Right, thou wilt go forth to-morrow, stronger, and better for this rest and rejoicing. We come, we come from the struggles, the defeats and the victories, the joys and the sorrows - those bright and dark threads of which the web and woof of human existence are woven, - we come, O Alma Mater, the baptism of thy name upon us, to thy outstretched arms and throbbing heart.
