Excerpt: .we resided with them, and we were never allowed to go to any other meeting. We were never allowed to read the writings of any other denomination, but if such books were found among us, they were burned: and instead of reading the Bible in meeting as the Christian denominations do, the Shakers read some writings of their own denomination, giving the orders and commands laid down by Ann Lee or some of her disciples, and such like things. One Sabbath, when the hour of worship arrived, one of our ministers came before us with a paper in his hand, for the purpose of reading a vision--and what was it? It was the wild fruits of the imaginations of a drunken negro, who had been to Lebanon with a load of things for market, and had got brandy and concealed it in the stable,...
