He soon outgrew his awkward manners and became a graceful and dignified prince of dogs. He knew so much that it seemed at times as though he longed to tell us what he was thinking about. If he could not speak in our language, he could express his thoughts so clearly at times that no one could misunderstand him. Prince was so neat and trustworthy that he was allowed the freedom of the house, a privilege which he never abused. He was always on hand in the morning to greet each member of the family with a loving look, and a hearty wag of his glossy, shaggy tail. He had the most expressive eyes of any dog I ever saw. They followed so unceasingly every movement and mood of my sister, whom he loved above all else, that...
