Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: .to the brief presentation of patients and specimens, the latter half to an informal reunion during which lunch and liquid refreshments are served. Essentials Of Physiology. Prepared especially for students of medicine by Sidney P. Budgett, M. D., Professor of Physiology in the Medical Department of Washington University, St. Louis. Arranged with Questions following each chapter. Illustrated. W. B. Saundkras Company, Philadelphia and London. The publishers have added to their question compends an excellent little book, which possesses a rare, if not unique quality, among works of its title, in requiring the student to reason out of the text answers to the questions which follow the chapters. This is a decided step in advance of the system of stereotyped question and answer which seems to prevail in quiz books. The conducting paths of the central nervous system have been well represented in a number of original...
