Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Western Comrade Holland hopes vainly for neutrality and peace, but the fate that awaits her is only slightly less terrible than that of Belgium. Italy's position cannot long be maintained. Only the solidarity and vigor of the Socialists have thus far prevented that country plunging into the vortex and hurling a fleet across the Adriatic at the hated Austrians. Servia and Austria-Hungary can scarcely hope for integrity of boundaries no matter how the tide of battle turns. Portugal and Spain will be drawn in and both will meet the fate of Belgium and Holland. This brings us to the position of Germany: If the Kaiser tomorrow were to find himself at war with the whole world his position would scarcely be changed. There is no reason to doubt that, since the war began, Germany's prearranged plans have not been carried out to the letter. German strategists carefully figured the losses, discounted plans and made allowances for all and more reverses than have come to their arms. That the German fleet would be securely interned at Keil and Heligoland was known months before the outbreak. England's navy has inflicted no loss of importance on the German fleet. The Kaisers great navy remains intact and in superb condition. No foreign foe remains on German soil. The loss of a hundred thousand fighting men has not impaired Germany's strength. As for food supply the Kaisers forces need not know want as long as the Vaterland is not invaded and invasion does not seem probable. The alliance between Russia and England is unnatural and there is a profound feeling of distrust between Slav and Briton....
